Introduction

If all went well, you received a letter a little while ago, announcing that a survey is being held among Antilleans. The survey includes questions about your work, education and state of health, as well as about contacts with members of your family and your opinions about a number of issues.

I would like to emphasize that you will remain anonymous. The answers will be treated in the strictest confidence.

I have not been hired by the government, but work for a research bureau called Veldkamp. So please feel free to give your own opinion.

E10. With this study we hope to gain more insight into the role played by the family in people's lives. To be able to do so, we would like to ask other members of your family a few questions too. It concerns the people we just talked about (INT.: list the persons another time). Your partner is also included. (INT.: adapt the text if necessary). We would like to ask these people to complete a short questionnaire, which should take about a quarter of an hour. Is it all right if we ask them to fill in a self-completion questionnaire? Needless to say, the answers given by your family will be treated with strict confidentiality.

INT.: please fill in the separate registration form now!

I would now like to ask you a few questions about your family.
